Dr. Angelina Williams graduated from Tuskegee University School of Veterinary Medicine in Tuskegee, AL in 2004 and completed her Comparative Medicine residency at the University of Rochester Medical Center in Rochester, NY in 2009. LCDR Williams completed her Master of Public Health at the University of Texas Health Science Center in 2017. Later that same year, she answered the call to volunteer, as a civilian, during disaster recovery efforts in the aftermath of Hurricane Harvey in her hometown of Houston, TX. This ultimately influenced her decision to apply to the United States Public Health Service. LCDR Williams was called to Active Duty in October 2021. She currently serves as an Animal Welfare Program Specialist at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Maryland. LCDR Williams is a diplomate of the American College of Laboratory Animal Medicine. She is an experienced Clinical Veterinarian with a passion for increasing the awareness and prevention of zoonotic diseases for the extent of her 20-year long career. In her spare time, she enjoys playing volleyball, running, and spending quality time with her husband Reese, 2 kids (Gabby and Trey) and their dog, Chase.
